

FORBES' INTERNATIONAL EDITION EXPOSES THE INTERNET'S BIGGEST SCAMMERS: "PHISHERS," REELING-IN PASSWORDS, CREDIT CARD NUMBERS AND MORE

New York, NY (September 24, 2004)—In "Cybercon" (p. 30), Forbes' international edition uncovers the latest Internet danger: "phishers." These scammers are, "infiltrating your inbox, stealing passwords, credit cards and whatever else you've got," reveals Forbes, which also suggests ways to protect against them. The lighter side of the Web is the focus in, "Ordinary Hero" (p. 22), relating how Michael Lewis' hot new Internet game, "brings out the superhero in all of us." For these and other articles, visit www.forbes.com.

ALSO IN THIS ISSUE:

FIRST, HEAL THYSELF (p. 18)—Can Michael Jordan save EDS? As the company's feeble state continues to fuel takeover rumors, its embattled CEO insists the tech outsourcing giant is not for sale.

ET TU, NATHAN? (p. 40)—Former Microsoft CTO Nathan Myhrvold has a new business these days—enforcing patents against alleged infringers, including his old employer.

SUPPLEMENTAL INCOME (p. 44)—Pyramid vitamin vendor Herbalife is looking to celebrity endorsements to lend legitimacy to the controversial dietary supplement company, but will they do the trick?

MOUSE HUNT (p. 41)—Speculation about a successor began soon after Disney head Michael Eisner announced his plan to step down in two years—Forbes rates possible candidates' chances on a scale of 1 to 5 "Mickeyes."

PLUCKING FLOWERS FROM WALL STREET (p. 50)—Investment veteran John Keeley profits from finding valuable companies that Wall Street doesn't like.

TWILIGHT ZONE (p. 60)—Can medicine revive brain-damaged patients who are stuck between coma and consciousness?

LOOK MA—NO HANDS, AND NO FEET! (p. 62)—"The Adventurer" travels to Russia to defy gravity, part of Space Adventures' "steps to space" program, which includes a Zero-G flight over Moscow.

GET YOUR TICKETS FIXED (p. 46)—For 21 years Glen Bolofsky has helped motorists find ways to beat the New York City Parking Violations Bureau, what he deems one of the most oppressive, arbitrary regimes on the planet.

CONTACT: Meghan Womack at 212-367-4157 or mwomack@forbes.com