FORBES KICKS OFF 2009 INVESTOR iCONFERENCE SERIES

Web-Only Event, "Finding Value During Uncertain Times," Features Steve Forbes and an All-Star Panel of Investment Advisors and Experts

NEW YORK, NY (March 3, 2009) – Forbes.com (www.forbes.com), the leading business news Web site reaching 20 million business decision makers each month, today announced the first 2009 Investor iConference, "Finding Value During Uncertain Times," to be held on March 12, 2009, from 9:00 a.m. – 6:30 p.m. ET.

Designed to help investors navigate the current turbulent market environment, the free online-only event will feature Forbes Chairman & CEO Steve Forbes and some of the most successful and insightful investment advisers in the market today.

Among the topics to be covered - value investing, fixed-income, mutual funds, REITs and ETFs, global investing, small-caps and growth stocks, blue chip dividend growers, energy investing, gold and other commodities. The event includes a special one-hour workshop devoted to finding the safe high-yield, income generating investments from bonds, blue chip stocks, Canadian Energy Trusts, municipal bonds and Treasurys.

According to Matthew Schifrin, Vice President and Investments Editor of Forbes, "The 2008 iConferences were extremely successful, and we're very pleased to kick off the 2009 series with such a stellar line-up of investment professionals. Now more than ever, investors need the advice and guidance our team of financial experts can provide."
